

BANKS LANE BLOG

Wow! a new half term at Banks Lane, we are all so proud of how you have adapted to our new way of learning. Let's continue to use all of our learning powers this term. Remember to keep smiling!

LEARNING POWERS!

June 8th World Oceans Day

On 8 June hundreds of events will take place (ensuring social distancing still of course) across the world to mark World Oceans Day.

This year there is a focus on calling for world leaders to commit to protecting 30% of our oceans by 2030.

There's a hope that if this happens it'll help combat climate change and protect marine biodiversity.

Use this link to find out more and complete the quiz to find out what Marine animal you are most like - I got seal!

Jokes of the day!

*What did the beach say to the wave?

-Long tide, no sea! (haha great play on homophones!)

Can you work out the answer to this joke? Email us with your answers.

*How do we know that the ocean is friendly?

Scavenger hunt

Well done Ben in 3L who was the first to complete the scavenger hunt with photo evidence too! Super effort Ben, you used your Cosmic Curiosity learning power perfectly!

Welcome back

We hope you have had a relaxing two-week break; it may be hard now to get back into a daily routine, remember to use the remote learning work to help motivate you each day! This is all updated on the website for this week.
